

Dear Friends,

In the beginning of the year we naturally look to the future. We are hopeful for things to happen to our benefit and excited about new opportunities. Some things might also raise some questions. What's going to happen? The Brexit divorce has to be arranged, we look warily towards world leaders, the complexity of the war in Syria feels paralyzing, we still deal with the refugee crisis and work on preventing and protecting from the terror threat. In addition you still have your fair share to deal with in your own life: family, finances, job and health issues.

There is one ray of hope, one little light, that still is shining and especially this year, when we remember 500 years of the Lutheran Reformation. It was in 1517 when an insignificant monk dared to question the status quo and with increasing certainty made his stand, even before the emperor Charles V. His intention was to "reform" the church, not to split it. And God knows, it needed to go back to the roots. That's what Luther discovered: the long lost truth of the Gospel of Christ. As a sign post and significant event we consider October 31st of the same year to be the beginning of the reformation when Luther nailed the 95 Theses against the unchristian practice of the indulgences to the door of the Castle Church in Wittenberg (the notice board of the city). It wasn't easy as his opponents (mighty and violent ones too) threatened him and he prevailed only by the grace of God. He stood up for what he know from the Word of God to be true and right. His fight was all about Jesus. His preaching and teachings, his writings and composing, his life and relationships, everything was propelled by the newfound Gospel: the assurance of forgiveness of our sins and the sonship as the a child of God and the loving presence of the Spirit, all because of what Christ had done on the cross without our works, good deeds or other human intervention. As a free gift from God to us.

It's 2017. 500 years after Luther it's still about Jesus. I invite you to focus on Him in the coming months together. Let your spirit soar like an eagle. Let the hope we have in Christ encourage and strengthen you for the tasks ahead, and disperse your fear of the future. Have a great Reformation year, Pastor Tepper

5 Important Things the Lutheran Reformers Wrote

... and why they're still important today

In this issue: #3 Luther's September Testament – In Luther's time, most people never read the Bible because most copies were written in Latin, a language that no one spoke and few Germans could even read. Luther changed this by translating the New Testament into German. The first edition became known as the "September Testament" because it was printed in September 1522. By translating Scripture into German, Luther returned the New Testament to the language of the people, a process that continues to day. No matter what language someone speaks, God's Word can still proclaim freedom in Christ to them.

Important Things Luther Said ... and what he meant by it

„A Christian is a perfectly free lord of all, subject to none.

A Christian is a perfectly dutiful servant of all, subject to all.“

The Freedom of a Christian (1520)

By this, Luther meant that Jesus Christ is a Christian's only Lord—a Lord who commands us to love our neighbor as we love ourselves.

(both taken from the Lutheran Handbook by Augsburg Fortress)

Reading your Bible is the life blood of every Christian. The very Words of Christ nourish and encourage us, bring us deeper in our relationship with the Lord and help us grow in our faith.

What about our Lutheran Confessions?

I highly recommend reading them on a regular basis. Not as a replacement for the Bible, but rather a supplement to your daily intake of Scripture. You will experience the struggles and questions that our church fathers faced when they penned those important documents. Some are shorter (like the Small Catechism), others are longer (like the Apology of the Augsburg Confession). Some were written by Luther, some by others. 1580 they were put together as an appropriate expression of the Lutheran faith. By reading them you will discover much about what we believe. In the center of them all stands Christ, by whose blood we are fully and freely redeemed.
